

Writing in English when it is not your first language

Target Group: Technical authors whose mother tongue is not English

Duration: 2 days

---

Course Overview: Global technology businesses often have development departments in many different countries. Lean development methods mean that technical authors need to be close to development teams. As a result, many technical authors writing in English do not have first-language proficiency in the language. The course concentrates on grammar and style topics that are particularly relevant for writing product documentation and that can be challenging for authors whose first language is something other than English.

Topics addressed include:

- Use of articles
  - Agreement and number
  - Prepositions
  - Word order
  - Using verbs effectively
  - Using modifiers correctly

Course Methodology: In addition to classroom training, we offer our courses as remote training units. As our courses have a modular design, we can tailor our content to your location and working schedules. For example, we can offer regular weekly training sessions using video or telephone conferencing as an alternative to classroom training.
